

Records Review Study

Independent Reviewer Panel · Study overview

Prepared for Priyam Dhamankar

About the study

An independent study in which experienced professionals from many countries review a common set of records and give their professional judgment. The aim is to understand how consistently experienced reviewers assess whether administrative and workplace records are adequately supported to rely on in a high-stakes, accountable decision.

What you would do

Review 24 short records, each about a page. For each one, give your professional judgment. Most reviewers finish in about an hour, at their own pace, and the tool saves your place if you step away.

What it does not involve

No payment or honorarium. Participation is entirely voluntary.

No confidential, proprietary, or organization-specific information. Every record is constructed for the study. You never share anything about any organization you work with now or have worked with in the past, and there is nothing for you to disclose from your side.

Recognition

With your consent, and with your approval of the exact wording, you are named as a reviewer in any write-up of the study. You receive a certificate of completion, a written recommendation on request, and a summary of the results.

Your reviewer access

Reviewer: Priyam Dhamankar

Reviewer code: RR-113

A personal reviewer link is included in the accompanying message. Please use that exact link, as it carries your code.

One request

Please review each record purely on what is in front of you. No preparation is needed, and it works best if you judge the records on their own terms.

Phillip Wikes, Study Lead

© 2026 Phillip Wikes · Records Review Study